This week we'll finish up your peer conferencing on the Syrian Civil War essays. We'll also turn our attention to the upcoming Smarter Balance Assessment with a practice test in class on Wednesday. This is just to re-familiarize you with the format and expectations. Thursday we'll cover the rules for commas that we started last Thursday.

There is no homework due in LA this week because of the play, however, remember that your final draft of your essay is due next Friday, April 8th. You have feedback from your group to start with and you'll get feedback from me next week.

Math:

We are starting Algebra! We will start with solving and writing single variable equations and then work on single variable inequalities. I will have your Probability tests back to you this week. In class on Thursday you will do a blog post about the NYC Scale building project and a probability unit blog post. We will focus on integers in goal work time. No homework this week.

SCIENCE:

This week in science we will continue working with the Speed & Acceleration formulas (with a quiz on Wednesday.) We will also decipher some graphs involving motion (speed over time and acceleration over time). Thursday students will receive the study guide for next week's Force & Motion Exam.

Homework:

Review if you have had difficulty with the Speed & Acceleration work OR the Laws of Motion Quiz

Social Studies:

This week you'll learn alternative investments in the lesson and we'll work on some more skills about writing essays and arguments in the activity.
